SEWE Celebrates Art & the Sporting Life

The Southeastern Wildlife Expo is a three-day showcase of everything South Carolinians love about wildlife and nature. It brings people of all ages--sportsmen and conservationists, artists and artisans, fans and families--together in historic Charleston.

Through an incredible lineup of events – from fine art exhibits, conservation education, sporting demonstrations, and parties, the expo invites everyone to explore their “wild” side and pay tribute to the naturally beautiful world.

Staff Photo

Cooking demonstrations are among the most popular attractions at the SCDA tent. Chefs offer samples of their presentations and copies of their innovative recipes.

Hundreds of exhibitions celebrate the wonder of wildlife and nature. The only question is: What will you see first? The exhibits range from stunning wildlife photography to world-renowned handmade duck calls, realistic decoys for serious hunters, superb custom knives, inspired jewelry, vintage carvings, and dozens of other unique displays. Artists from around the world will share their passion for the wild and natural beauty of our planet.

A Wild Time In Charleston

It's no wonder the Southeastern Wildlife Expo has become one of the premier events of the year in our state. Held each February in lovely Charleston (which I understand has just been named—again—as the No. 1 tourist destination in the country), the Wildlife Expo gets better and better every year.

The quality and variety of the exhibits is superb, and many people are regular attendees. A few years back I attended the waterfowl banquet because a friend of mine was getting an award. I especially enjoy the exhibits and the competitions for dogs.

Our department started participating in 2010, and we saw such great results that we wouldn't think of missing it. Last year about 40,000 people attended the Wildlife Expo, and I think most of them came through our tent!

In fact, we've outgrown two tents and have upgraded to an even bigger one this year. It's a great trade show for our Specialty Food producers, and the 22 vendors who were lucky enough to get a spot will be in our tent. We sold out a good while ago, and there's a waiting list to get in.

SEWE is one of the highest profile events in South Carolina, and it's based on wildlife. In fact, wildlife art is the foundation of the whole weekend, with several locations around the city available to view art.

I enjoyed seeing wildlife expert Jack Hanna a few years back when he was in the Gilliard Auditorium and our tent was out front. Back then, our department got the overflow from his show. Now the agriculture tent is one of the main attractions at Marion Square.

People come to us for the food. We have a great line-up of top chefs who will be preparing local food with a gourmet twist. Our department is a natural tie between the outdoor coalitions of recreation, food lovers, and the South Carolina farmer. We offer one more opportunity to expose what our SC farmers are providing and how consumers can enjoy food in new and different ways.

Having a tent at SEWE is a great, high-profile way to expose agriculture to everyone. We hope to see you in Charleston next weekend.

SC Ag Council Spring Quarterly Meetings and Tours Are Scheduled

The Ag Council had a great 2014! Their meetings included a workshop by nationally renowned motivator Michele Payn-Knoper on Championing Agriculture and Farming in Your Social Community; a presentation by Katie Welborn on The Midlands Local Food Collaborative; an update on the direction of extension services in South Carolina by Dr. Thomas Dobbins, Director of Clemson University Cooperative Extension Service; and a presentation about 2014 Farm Bill by Harry Ott, State Executive Director of the Farm Service Agency.

The Council's tours in 2014 included a visit in the spring to Rosebank Farms on John's Island to tour the first, and at this point only, incubator farm in SC. In the fall, the council enjoyed a walking tour of the Darla Moore Botanical Garden, McKenzie Farms, the Lake City Bean Market, and Jones-Carter Art Gallery.

After such a successful year in 2014, the Ag Council is looking forward to 2015 with more great meetings and two more fun tours planned. Ag Council meetings for 2015 are scheduled for Feb. 26, May 14, Aug. 13, and Nov. 12. The spring and fall tours are scheduled for Apr. 24 and Sept. 11. Look for information on our Feb. 26 meeting in a future edition of the Market Bulletin.

Dues for 2015 will be $25. The registration fee for our quarterly meetings remains at $10 in advance and $15 at the door. Members will again have the option of prepaying the four quarterly meetings – making the total cost of dues and prepaid lunches at a discounted $55.

Hunting-related and outdoor demonstrations play a big role in the expo. Visitors can watch dock dog competitions, retrievers in action, cast net and birds of prey demos, fly fishing, speed sculpting, and dozens more!

One of the most popular draws, of course, is the food. The S.C. Department of Agriculture is sponsoring three days of cooking demonstrations and food samples from the top chefs in the state. The chefs will be preparing dishes using local South Carolina food.

As a bonus, Specialty Food vendors will have booths under the big ag tent in Marion Square, with free samples of their delicious products as well as plenty of items for sale. A new vendor this year is Gillespie Peanuts, featuring peanuts grown in South Carolina.

The department's theme is "Wild in the Kitchen." Not only will the chefs be preparing sumptuous food, but their recipes will be available in a special-issue cookbook. Three of the state's four Chef Ambassadors will be cooking and answering questions from the crowd. Innovative pairings of food are their specialty.

New this year, our department will have a photo booth ready for you to snap your photo using your smart phone. Any photos you upload while enjoying SEWE's festivities using #SCDAgoesWild will automatically be entered to win a $250 Specialty Foods Gift Basket. The more photos you take, the better your chances of winning. We can't wait to see your photos on Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram. Go Wild!

For details on this wonderful weekend, go to the website: sewe.com and always visit agriculture.sc.gov for event specifics and more on the social media contest.

Low Country Livestock Exchange Replaces Darlington Auction

Upgrades are attracting new customers

New owners, new name, new look—the former Darlington Livestock Auction is now Low Country Livestock Exchange.

With the name change comes an emphasis on livestock: cattle, goats, sheep, and pigs. No small animals, and no poultry. Some changes are immediately apparent. The entire facility has been cleaned, top to bottom, and freshly painted. A new drive-through chute has been added for the convenience of livestock owners, and all the pens have been upgraded.

Donnie Poplin and Lynda Fleming, who took over the market just before Christmas, are no strangers to livestock auctions. They manage several others in South and North Carolina, and their experience is evident.

"This sure doesn't look like the same place," was a frequent comment at the grand opening sale on Jan. 8. S.C. Commissioner of Agriculture Hugh Weathers braved frigid temperatures that day to open the market and wish the new owners well. He is no stranger to livestock auctions.

"My experience has been with dairy cows," he told the farmers who had packed into the sales arena. "We are glad to get this sale going in this part of the world. Agriculture has many outlets, and we need more markets."

The old market used to sell chickens, rabbits, and other small animals, but that actually drove customers away, according to Ms. Fleming. "The cattle buyers didn't want to sit through a chicken auction, so they started going to North Carolina markets," she said. Eventually the cattle and hog owners started hauling their animals to where the buyers were, and the auction market in Darlington got smaller and smaller.

When the lease on the property became available in December, the Poplin team moved in to start renovation and clean-up. Although the building dates to probably the 1950s, the fundamental design has stood the test of time. Tiered seating in the sales area allows the buyers—many of whom are local farmers—to see each animal as it is brought into the bull pen.

Benjie Andrew, a long-time cattle owner from Conway, was on hand to help with the sale. He deftly herded the cattle, which had just been weighed and tagged, onto the sales floor. As the auctioneer's chant rang out, farmers started bidding briskly. Within minutes, each animal had a new owner and was herded out the other side.

Throughout the day, farmers commented on how much improved the premises were. "This isn't their first rodeo, or auction market," Commissioner Weathers said about the Poplins. "It's clear that these folks know what they're doing." He joined Donnie and his son Dustin, who is also an auctioneer, behind the counter for about an hour. Sales were brisk and prices were high despite the low temperature.

Cattle are bringing good prices in South Carolina. Many cattle ranchers in Texas are seeking replacement heifers after devastating droughts depleted their numbers in recent years. A Limousine-cross bull that weighed 1755 pounds brought $1,800. The top-selling heifer that day sold for $4 a pound.

"Our department strives to keep the market news accurate, because you folks depend on it," Weathers said.

Office manager Ms. Fleming, who has worked with Donnie for about 10 years, explained the procedure for selling animals. "They can check in on Wednesday, if they like, and we have trucking available. The sale starts at 11 a.m. every Thursday and runs until we're through." Customers often bring livestock in on Thursday morning. A new computer system allows the auction house to have checks ready by the time the animals are loaded out that afternoon.

With only five livestock auction markets in South Carolina, the Low Country Livestock Exchange fills a void in the eastern part of the state. "Sales are picking up here every week," Poplin said.

The Low Country Livestock Exchange is located at 1989 Harry Byrd Hwy. in Darlington. It opens each Thursday at 11 a.m. For more information, call Donnie Poplin at 803-519-6948.
